"Many Hands Building A Better World"

The Unbreakable Boy is rated PG and comes from the same company behind the Best Christmas Pageant Ever and Wonder. The synopsis below will give you an idea of the themes in the movie. The movie is rated PG as it contains some violence, language and alcohol abuse. It includes themes of autism, alcoholism and marital difficulties. We believe this movie presents a meaningful educational opportunity, but we want to ensure all parents are comfortable with their child watching it. Please feel free to contact Mrs Johnson via email (johnsonje@holyspirit.ab.ca) if you would like details of specific examples of each of the topics mentioned above.

“When his parents, Scott (Zachary Levi) and Teresa (Meghann Fahy), learn that Austin is both autistic and has brittle bone disease, they initially worry for their son’s future. But with Scott’s growing faith and Austin’s incredible spirit, they become “unbreakable,” finding joy, gratitude, and courage even in the most trying times — an extraordinary true story about a father and son learning together that every day can be the best day of your life!”

Students will engage in a class discussion and assignment upon their return to school in relation to the story of the Unbreakable Boy.
